Outcome of the conference participation

Our presentation significantly increased the visibility of our work on LLM-based stereotype modelling and generated strong interest from an interdisciplinary audience spanning communication studies, computational social science, and AI ethics. The contribution—summarising our cross-linguistic analysis of warmth and competence stereotypes in six large language models—sparked discussions on methodological innovation, multilingual bias assessment, and the societal implications of LLM-mediated representations of gender and immigration groups.

The session and networking during the conference led to the establishment of several new contacts with clear potential for future collaboration. These interactions opened concrete opportunities for joint work on multilingual bias evaluation, cross-model stereotype measurement, and comparative human–AI stereotype research.

² For an online conference, specify virtual participation; for hybrid conferences, specify whether it is an in-person or virtual participation.

In addition, the presence of several OPINION COST members at the (pre-)conference strengthened internal network visibility and facilitated deeper within-network collaboration, particularly around shared methodological frameworks and upcoming joint publications.
