4 SESSION SUMMARIES I: DAY 1 (NETWORK-INTERNAL)

4.1 OPENING

- Welcome from Christian Baden, Chair of the OPINION Network; Vedran Mornar, Rector of VERN' University; and Tamara Kunic, VERN' University, and Local Host
- The program committee for the final conference included Christian Baden, Tamara Kunic, Peter Maurer, Ana Milojevic, and Elena Negrea Busuioc

4.2 OPINION WORKS I

- Lenka Vochocova's talk "Cringe culture in politics: Exploring humor, vulnerability, and ridi-cule in the digital age" introduced the forthcoming Central European Journal of Communication Special Issue on Cringe Culture in Politics, which she co-edited with Gabriella Szabo, and contains five articles, mostly from within the OPINION Network, as well as an interview with Irena Reifova and a Book Review of "Cringe Humor on Screen in Digital Media"
- Edlira Gugu presented her paper "Cringe as an instrument of modern propaganda", forthcoming in said special issue, a comparative four-country study of cringe-based political content weaponized in digital media to discourage and discredit participation by dissenting voices.
- Jurate Ruzaitė's presentation "When "irrelevant" comments turn out to matter: Rethinking the operationalisation of relevance in research on hostile online discussions" highlighted key challenges in the preparation of reusable data sets tied to variations in what qualifies as relevant contents, cautioning against the uncritical re-use of already relevance-focused data sets.
- Barbora Badurova and Celia Tsui presented their paper "Trusting the news in the age of artificial intelligence: A comparative study of the United Kingdom, Slovakia, and Hong Kong", proposing a connection between countries' distinctive media use cultures and media freedom and media audiences' willingness to accept journalistic uses of AI as trustworthy.

4.3 OPINION WORKS II

- Serap Durmus Öztürk presented her paper "Beyond evaluative text: Towards a multimodal opinion framework for urban experience research", which argues that opinions can be expressed via architectural and spatial means, offering a framework for extending multimodal frameworks of expression beyond textual and visual modalities.
- Peter Maurer's talk "Opinion diversity in the media and how to measure it: the case of immigration policy" presented a computational study of U.S. and U.K. media's coverage of U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, using artificial intelligence as a tool to recognize and classify expressed stance and media bias.
- Ana Jovancevic presented her paper "Simulating citizens, amplifying stereotypes: A multilingual study of persona effects in large language models", which documents artificial intelligence's tendency to reproduce relatively consistent,

- Kemal Gunay presented his project initiative “Nostalgia as generational and cultural opinion expression: Inferring age-related patterns in multilingual digital text”, which understands nostalgia as a distinctive form of cohort-dependent opinion expression that needs to be studied in an intercultural perspective.

- Anela Mulahmetovic Ibrisimovic presented her project idea “AI-assisted MIPVU-based metaphor identification and annotation”, which proposes developing a pipeline capable of automatically recognizing different types of metaphors and classifying their distinctive use of analogical reasoning.

5 SESSION SUMMARIES II: DAY 2 (STAKEHOLDER ENGAGEMENT)

5.1 OPINION MATTERS

- Asta Zelenkauskaitė and Nina Springer presented their conceptual paper “Shock and adaptation in opinion research: Incivility, disinformation and the authenticity challenge in synthetic generative AI content”, which likens online incivility, disinformation, and inauthenticity to three shock waves eroding the foundations of political discourse online.
- Mariken van der Velden’s presentation “From silence to influence: How populist parties’ communication captured the young vote” argues that rhetorical strategies typical of populist parties is used across many parties, but much more on the far right, while unaffiliated supporter accounts account for much of the toxicity.
- Ema Kristo presented her paper “Humor, stance and implicit evaluation in Albanian and Romanian-language opinion discourse: A cross-linguistic perspective”, which documents systematic intercultural differences between Moldova and Albania in how humor is used in political online discourse.
- Edlira Palloshi-Disha’s talk “Emotional appeals in political campaigns on social media: Strategic use and audience engagement” documented the differential role of anger, fear, hope and pride appeals for creating online engagement.
- Damian Guzek presented his paper “Exploring the role of emojis in online interaction”, which foregrounded the cultural dependency of using positive emotional signals in political discourse.

5.2 ROUNDTABLE: WEAPONIZED OPINIONS

- Host Carlos Arcila Calderon discussed the threats of hostile opinion expression and online toxicity with Serbian member of parliament and activist Djordje Pavicevic (ZLF), Croatian journalist Martina Pauček Šljivak (24sata), as well as Jūratė Ruzaitė and Lenka Vochocová from the OPINION Network. The discussion focused on diverse experiences from being targeted by incivility as part of either organic or strategic hostility, as well as avenues for addressing these threats by means of regulatory action, education, activism, and cultural change.

5.3 ROUNDTABLE: PUBLIC OPINION IN THE DIGITAL AGE

- Host Christian Baden discussed pressure politics in the manipulation of public opinion with Romanian policy analyst and researcher Dan Jurcan, as well as Helle Sjøvaag and Peter Maurer from the OPINION Network. The discussion revolved around the threats emanating from intransparent processes shaping dominant-appearing opinions across a fragmented media landscape, which hold the potential to - deliberately or as part of organically forming majority opinion - discourage and exclude the expression of dissenting views.

5.4 OPINION RECOMMENDS

- Elena Negrea Busuioc presented her study “Studying public opinion in the digital era: Challenges and recommendations”, which recommends reconceptualizing online opinion expression to consider the active role of non-human actors, embrace hybrid methods, rethink sampling logics and prioritize ethics.
- Damian Trilling’s talk “Dictionaries, machine learning, transformers or generative LLMs? A framework for deciding which approach to use for computational opinion mining” identified criteria suitable for guiding method choice, highlighting important collisions between needs and tool capacities that act as “showstoppers”.
- Ljubisa Bojic presented a talk entitled “Are we closing the future? Towards CERN for AI and societal AI alignment benchmark”, which synthesized several papers focused on comparing AI performance to human choices and argued for the need for systematic and transparent alignment.
- Hajo Boomgaarden’s presentation “Towards a shared OPINION data pipeline: Findability, storage, and responsible reuse” identified key needs for data re-use enabled by FAIR sharing and documentation, pitching the opportunities offered by OPINION’s cooperation with the European MeDem Infrastructure initiative.
- Dana Guy and Dren Gërguri presented their paper “Ethical challenges in the use of LLMs in multi-lingual text analysis”, which proposed extending current research ethics frameworks by conceptualizing AI use as inherently risky and in need of adequate justification.

5.5 CLOSING

- Christian Baden expressed special thanks to:
 - Helle Sjøvaag, Wouter van Atteveldt, Damian Trilling, and Kasper Welbers, without whom the OPINION Network would have never been formed;
 - Carlos Arcila Calderon, David Blanco Herrero, Hajo Boomgaarden, Nicoleta Corbu, Carlos Cunha, Johannes B. Gruber, Ana Milojevic, Marina Popescu, Agnieszka Stepinska, Gabriella Szabo, Damian Trilling, Mariken van der Velden, and Srdjan Vesic, for their untiring efforts at orchestrating the work of OPINION’s four Working Groups;
 - Ana Milojevic, Elena Negrea Busuioc, Nina Springer, and Asta Zelenkauskaitė, for running OPINION’s mobility grants, stakeholder relations and science communications;
