Type of the presentation: Oral presentation

Other details of the presentation: Session: Misinformation detection, fact-checking, and state propaganda

Outcome of the conference participation

The conference provided an important opportunity to present my research on generative AI and fake news to an international and interdisciplinary audience. The presentation contributed to increasing the visibility of my work, particularly within the field of misinformation studies.

During the session, I received valuable feedback from both the discussant and participants, especially regarding the methodological design of the study and the integration of quantitative and qualitative findings. These comments will be useful for further developing the study into a journal article.

The conference also enabled me to engage with other researchers working on misinformation detection, platform dynamics, and AI-based analysis. In addition, I established initial contacts with several participants whose research interests overlap with my own, particularly in the areas of AI-generated misinformation and fact-checking practices. These interactions may lead to future academic collaborations, including comparative studies and potential joint research projects.

Overall, participation in the conference significantly contributed to both the dissemination of my research and the expansion of my academic network within the COST Action framework.
